

William is a founder and CEO of Reduced Energy Microsystems, a fabless semiconductor company building extremely energy efficient chips for embedded AI and computer vision. He has done research in both asynchronous and synchronous VLSI design at Harvey Mudd College, the Asynchronous Research Center at Portland State University, and Intel labs. Prior to co-founding REM, William worked at AMD and Intel as a design and research engineer focused on low power circuit design and methodologies.